

Uh-Oh!
Who Gave The Elf
A Candy Cane?

Written by Staci Dodge

Okay, I'm going to come right and out and admit it. Last year around this time I gave an elf at the North Pole a candy cane and this is my story of what happened. I want everyone in the world to know that you never, ever give an elf at the North Pole a candy cane right before Christmas.

....Because when you give an elf a candy cane I can tell you first hand he is going to want to eat it right away. First he starts by peeling off the wrapper. And then he licks the top of the candy cane because it's looks so good. Then he licks the bottom of the candy cane because it looks even yummier. But uh oh -- now his hands are extremely sticky from touching the wet candy cane. That silly elf was enjoying the candy cane so much that he got it all over both his hands, and all over his face. What a delicious, sticky mess he made!

Well now, he can't possibly go back to work until he washes up.

So obviously, he is going to want to use the North Pole's magic bubbles reserved for boys and girls like you and me. (Here's a little secret shh... the Christmas elf used up all of the North Pole's magic bubbles, oh no!)

So once the elf starts washing his face and hands he can't stop. It's way too much fun.

Now bubbles are forming in different colors and floating up into the air from the magic bubble hand soap.

Now the elf wants to pop all the magic bubbles. First he starts to pop the pink bubbles.

I hope you enjoyed the preview, to purchase the entire book as a PDF file, please purchase from [www adaycare.com/blog.html](http://www adaycare.com/blog.html) we are going to be making a book page, but it's not ready yet.
